Designed between 1969 and 1972 and first flown into space in 1981, the NASA Shuttle will have flown almost 140 missions by the time it is retired in 2011. David Baker describes the origin of the reusable launch vehicle concept during the 1960s, its evolution into a viable flying machine in the early 1970s, and its subsequent design, engineering, construction, and operation. The Shuttle's internal layout and systems are explained, including the operation of life support, electrical-power production, cooling, propulsion, flight control, communications, landing, and avionics systems.

The report describes how to develop private sector transit contracts at the local level. It focuses on the experiences of rural transit operators who have successfully entered into contractual service agreements. It was originally developed as the background document for a workshop on contracting. The document's first section explores the benefits for contracting to the public and private sectors, planning for contracted services, how to develop the contract document itself, and how to monitor the service, maintenance, and financial aspects of a contract for transit service or support activities. The second section of the manual contains actual examples of procurement documents, notices, and procedures for use by the transit manager.

First published in 1991, this book presents a comprehensive annotated bibliography of radio broadcasting. Its eleven chapter-categories cover almost the entire range of radio broadcasting — with the exception of radio engineering due to its technical complexity although some of the historical volumes do encompass aspects, thus providing background material. Entries are primarily restricted to published books although a number of trade journals and periodicals are also included. Each entry includes full bibliographic information, including the ISBN or ISSN where available, and an annotation written by the author with the original text in hand.
